

New York State $100 Insulin Maximum

In 2020, a New York State law was passed that includes a provision limiting cost sharing for members in relation to eligible insulin medications. Under this law, cost sharing for insulin is limited to $100 per 30-day supply. The mandate applies to all out-of-pocket expenses, including copayments, deductibles, and coinsurance*.

Here are two examples to show how the mandate works for members:

A member's coinsurance is 20% and a 30-day supply of their insulin medication is $1,000. Even though 20% of the cost is $200, the amount the member has to pay is capped at $100.

A member's deductible is $5,000. The cost of a 30-day supply of their insulin medication is $1,000. If this member fills a 30-day prescription, they would pay $100, which would apply to their deductible. If they fill a 90-day insulin prescription, they would pay $300, which would apply to their deductible.

Health Plans Impacted
